In genealogical record of the Brubbloodmorris families, who were so closely [illegible] by kinship and spiritual interests, must also be closely related to the history of the religious denomination of Friends, to which they belonged. [illegible] William Penn, settled Pennsylvania, and then spread to other parts [illegible] colonies. They became quite numerous in southeastern Virginia, and to a certain extent, the Carolina meetings were a combination of the overflow from the meetings in Virginia. According to Weeks in his "Southern Quakers and Slavery", the first Quaker colonies in North Carolina were in the counties of Perquimans and Pasquotank, where Edwardson and Fox, Quakers leaders, had planted meetings in 1672.

Story, in his Journal, tells of visiting North Carolina in 1699, and in [illegible] of that year, held a meeting at the home of Henry White on Little River, as well as one at the home of Stephen Scout. This meeting was "small, but well and tender". On the 1st of the 3rd month, 1703, at a monthly meeting held at the house of Caleb [illegible] in Pasquotank, Friends agreed that a meeting house should be built "at Pasquotank, with as much speed as can be". Dr. Weeks says: "This is the oldest Quaker meeting [illegible] of which we have distinct record, and it places their church edifices among the [illegible] oldest in the colony". Among these early Quakers, in addition to those already mentioned, were the Newbys, Albertsons, Scotts, Henleys, Nicholsons, Symonses, and many others.

In order for the reader to more fully understand certain terms and usages mentioned in this record, the author feels that a brief explanation of their use by the Friends should be given here. Since their marriages were held entirely under the [illegible] of the Society, and no licenses were obtained, the Friends had, according to Weeks, [illegible] English law, as early as 1661, to recognize the legality of their marriages. When their meetings were once established, it was considered contrary to their discipline to be married in a home. Their marriages were therefore held in open meetings. The marriage ceremony, however, could not be carried out until the parties to be married had announced their intentions, and committees had been appointed by both men and women to see if the contracting parties were both "clear" from other "[illegible] [illegible]". If these conditions were found satisfactory, the parties were then "[illegible] liberty to take each other". This ceremony was usually carried out in [illegible] of the entire congregation, with each member present signing the [illegible] and as a witness. Needless to say, the Friends did not believe in divorce. There [illegible] no record of divorces in the early church. Their marriages were for life. [illegible] of these marriage rings are included in this record.

[illegible] were warned to "Weed out of their family [illegible] and brethren." [illegible] always advised against marrying outside of their own community, [illegible] called it, "Marrying out of Society". When this was done, they were disowned. [illegible] no longer [illegible] on the church roster, [illegible] their actions, and both parties became members of the [illegible] record of those in good standing in the society, however, is one of the [illegible] of any kept in those times. It was also an offense to be married by [illegible] of an outsider, and those who did so were usually condemned, since such a marriage would be "contrary to discipline". Their condemnation carried with it [illegible] different kinds of punishment.

They made [illegible] no [illegible] between [illegible] and other [illegible] which was [illegible] against a [illegible] "Near Relations", [illegible] "Unchastity" and [illegible] in the making or selling of [illegible] a God-fearing atmosphere from the early Quakers were [illegible]. [illegible] hundred years the Friends have accepted many modern customs, yet they have [illegible] in their devotion to God and the basic principles of their faith. [illegible] nowhere that the early Truebloods and Harris's lived.

A family experience will illustrate their basic adherence to their [illegible]. When my father, as a lad, visited an aunt with his mother, he noticed a pin on the floor and picked it up. His aunt, noticing this, spoke quickly, "That hast [illegible] Albert". With a smile, he replied, "Nothing but a pin, aunt". His aunt's [illegible] brief and to the point. "Give it to me, Albert. If thou wouldst keep a small thing, thou wouldst soon learn to keep a big thing". Needless to say, he never forgot [illegible] lesson. Cellars, in those days, had shelves filled with apples, stored for the [illegible] When visiting, the children could have all the apples they could eat, but they would never dare to get one without first asking and getting permission. Otherwise, [illegible] would have been theft.

So far as could be obtained these records were brought down to 1950. [illegible] Harris data are later included, but not in detail. My thanks are due to the many [illegible] who have given me invaluable aid and assistance. I have had partial access to the records of the early Friends in Virginia and North Carolina. I have had access to the early record of the Trueblood Family, and family diaries of the Thomas [illegible] Family, of which I have two. I have had access to many court records in Virginia, North Carolina, and Indiana, and to the records of the Highland Monthly Meeting of the Friends in Washington Co., Indiana, since about 1845. Particular thanks are due [illegible] generations of the Trueblood and Harris families, who have [illegible] their time and information so that this work more complete. Their help [illegible] appreciated, and it is the hope of this author that they may find sufficient [illegible] when then the information herein to at least partially repay them for their [illegible]

[illegible]:

[illegible] [illegible]

The early life of the first member of the Trueblood family is [illegible] although he came from [illegible], the name Trueblood has not been [illegible] the family Twelfth name. Variations have been found, however, with the [illegible] and "Blood", and the supposition has been that True was given our first [illegible] a middle name, and that Blood was his surname. After his arrival in [illegible] and to have unitedum his name as one word to show that he was not [illegible] or illegitimate. Hence came the name Trueblood.

The first John Trueblood was born in England (according to tradition) [illegible] between 1670 and 1680, he was married to Agnes Fisher, also of England, [illegible] said to have left Albemarle, England, with his wife in the early 1690's. [illegible] his arrival in America, he entered a good body of land along the [illegible] in Albemarle Province, North Carolina. Four children were [illegible] born to [illegible], and they were all mentioned as minors in his will, made the same [illegible] when he died. These children were left to be "brought up" according to the [illegible] his wife. We do not know their religious beliefs, but from the wording of [illegible] will we know that he was a God-fearing man, as well as an affectionate [illegible] loving husband. Two of these children, Mary and Elizabeth, were daughters, [illegible] record of their births, marriages, or deaths. Then the two sons, John and [illegible] all the Truebloods in America are descended, so far as we can determine.

The will of John Trueblood, the First, is dated "4th of July, 1692", [illegible] County, North Carolina, and begins "In the name of God, Amen. I, John [illegible] of sound body and mind". The story of this will is stranger than fiction. It came to light after more than 200 years, having been bought up with some old [illegible] and broke in a junk shop for if were nothing. It was found under [illegible] the State Library at Raleigh, North Carolina, there, so far as [illegible] years. Following is a copy of this will, taken from the original.

[illegible]

[illegible] July, 1692,

[illegible] Province, Carolina.

[illegible] name of God, Amen. I, John Trueblood, being [illegible] body [illegible] last will and testament, as follows: I give unto my lovin[illegible] wife the ..... or one half part of all my moveable goods and [illegible] of my land during her natural life, and return her death to my [illegible]

[illegible] and [illegible] known.

I give and bequeath the other ..... or half part of my moveable [illegible] equally divided between my four children, that is to say, Mary Trueblood, [illegible] Elizabeth, John Trueblood and Amos Trueblood.

I hereby also appoint my loving wife Agnes Trueblood to be my lawful executrix of this my last will and testament and to bring up my children according to her discretion and to pay to them their portions as they come to lawful age.

And lastly I do appoint and ordain in case my wife should die without making [illegible] this my ..... appoint Thomas Symons and Jeremiah Symons to take [illegible] with their discretion and care for the good of my children and to bring them [illegible] according to their discretion.

As witness my hand and seal this the Seventh day of May, 1692.

Agnes Fisher Trueblood did not long survive the death of her husband. Her will was dated September 15, 1692, and probated October 3, 1692. In this she [illegible] to her sons, John and Amos, and to her daughters, Mary and Elizabeth [illegible] There were no witnesses and no executor, but it was signed by the Clerk of the [illegible] Paul Latham.

John, the eldest son, resided in Pasquotank County, where he left his will, dated October 15, 1734. This was evidently the date of probate, as it was also dated [illegible] 1734. In this will he leaves to his son, John, (my manner plantation) also a plantation on Arrenuse Creek known by the name of Gretchen Old Field, and [illegible] to his son, Fisher, he leaves tholand known by the name of Ieve Neck, and to his [illegible] son, Daniel, he leaves one negro. Negroes were also left to his daughters, Mirian [illegible] Elizabeth Trueblood, as well as to his wife and executrix, Sarah. Executors were also [illegible] (brother) and David Jones. The witnesses to the will were John [illegible] Willoughby Lilee, and Douglas Reed. Clerk of the Court was James Smith.

Sarah, the wife, died December 27, 1773. Elizabeth's record has not been found. I have no further record of John, but Fisher was born April 4, 1732, and married [illegible] Thornton on Feb. 6, 1770. Daniel was born April 15, 1724, and married Mary [illegible] March 3, 1757. Mirian married Joseph Symons on January 1, 17[illegible]/[illegible].

My own line of descent comes down the son, Enos, who was born in the Province of [illegible], about 1691 or 1692, and died as a member of the Pasquotank Monthly Meeting of Friends on Dec. 20, 1759. At the time of his death he was about 67 years of age. About 1712 he was married to Elizabeth Burchette, daughter of [illegible] Burchette, who had been married themselves in the Society of Friends [illegible] 1693. Unfortunately at the time of their marriage Enos Chadwick was [illegible] of the Episcopal Church as the records of the Pasquotank Monthly Meeting [illegible] Seth and Catherine, her sister, daughters of Grace Holley Cartwright, were disowned for marrying "out of Society and before a justice. Elizabeth Cartwright was a Friend [illegible] 1693, but "was treated with and disowned for her outgoing in marriage" on June 12, 1715, and on April 22, 1716, her mother was disowned for allowing her two daughters to marry out of the Society. However, in later years, Elizabeth with her husband and children were received into the church, for on Oct. 5, 1745, we find in the church record that a meeting was allowed at Enos' dwelling because of difficulties of attending meeting at Newbegun Creek. The following children were born to this marriage before the death of the mother, Elizabeth Chadwick, on October 30, 1757.

John, the oldest, was born in 1713, but died in infancy.

Thomas was born in 1716, married Lydia Albertson on Jan. 14, 1744, at Old Neck Friends House, but was disowned on August 19, 1767. He died in 1784.

Abel (See below).

Josiah, born Nov. 18, 1725, married Elizabeth Arnold on March 14, 1759, died in 1809.

Meriam, born in 1726, died in 1730.

Joshua, born in 1726, married Miriam Morris on Sept. 2, 1749, and died on Nov. [illegible] 1761.

Caleb, born April 14, 1732, married Mary Conner, born May 1, 1741, on October 15, 1761, [illegible] a public assembly at Newbegun Creek. After her death on December 8, 1767, he married Hannah Marriott at the Elizabeth Monthly Meeting on Feb. 20, 1769. She died [illegible] November 7, 1774, and on April 6, 1777, he married Ann Delano, of the Perquimans Monthly Meeting. He died in 1808.

[illegible] third child of Abel and Elizabeth Cartwright Chadwick, and [illegible] of descent, was born in the Province of Albemarle, North Carolina [illegible] and died Sept. 29, 1807, at the age of 85 years and 4 mos. On Nov. 1, 1746, he was married to marry Jemima Scott, daughter of Joshua and Sarah Scott. Jemima Scott was born July 19, 1730, and died Jan. 31, 1777. She was a relative of Job Scott, a great apostle of Quakerism, and was a granddaughter of Joseph Scott, whom George Fox mentions in his religious works in North Carolina.

Abel Chadwick was evidently a highly respected member of the Society of Friends. On [illegible] 5, 1757, he was chosen an overseer in Pasquotank Monthly Meeting, an honor which was later conferred upon him at Symons Creek on July 17, 1772. On Nov. 16, 1777 along with others in the church, he was named to attend the Quarterly Meeting.

[illegible] children born to this marriage were:

[illegible], born [illegible], 1747, [illegible], died [illegible], 1776, [illegible].

[illegible], born Oct. 24, 1747, [illegible], died [illegible], [illegible].

Fourth, born Dec. 10, 1753, N.S., married Margaret Jordan on July 17, 1776, [illegible] in 1824.

[illegible], born May 26, 1757, declared his intention on Oct. 15, 1783, of marrying [illegible]. He was he erect married on Dec. 11, 1785, and a committee had [illegible] expelled him from the Society for marriage contrary to discipline. Upon his death on March [illegible] 1824, the expulsion was removed.

Elizabeth, born July 6, 1761, was disowned on June 20, 1789, for showing her [illegible] under [illegible]. She died in 1811.

Caleb, born Aug. 27, 1763, was disowned on August 16, 1791, for his marriage [illegible] to discipline. On June 17, 1786, he condemned his marriage out of unity, and per[illegible] was restored to good standing. However, on August 15, 1807, Caleb, senior, was [illegible] disowned for selling a woman into slavery. He died in 1813.

Joshua (See Chapter 2.

Abel, born January 16, 1771, married Mary Lynch April 26, 1813, and on [illegible] 1813 this Mary Truebloo certificates for themselves and their children, Phinehas, [illegible] Hermon, and Jordan, to Rich Creek Monthly Meeting, Washington Co., Ohio.

John, born Dec. 28, 1773, died May 14, 1774.

Least two years after the death of his first wife, Abel Trueblood was [illegible] Elizabeth Lowby Piper, relict of Nathan Piper, on Dec. 2, 1778, at Friends' Meeting on Little River, N.C. She died Oct. 21, 1817, at the age of 77 years. Their children [illegible]

Hannah, born Dec. 10, 1779, was disowned Feb. 20, 1808, for marrying out of society. Date of death unknown.

Mirian, born May 7, 1783, died May 10, 1789.

Abigail, twins, born May 19, 1781. Anna died in 1845, but so far no [illegible] record of the death of Abigail.

[illegible], born 1785, died in 1785.

Edward Borough, born March 16, 1787, was disowned Sept. 16, 1815, for failure to attend meetings. He died in 1851.

The lineage of Joshua Trueblood, the third in my own line of descent from Jane and Elizabeth Cartwright Trueblood, and fourth from the original John and Agnes Fisher Trueblood follows in Chapter 2.

CHAPTER II.

THE LINEAGE OF ROBERT HENDRICKS.

Joshua, the seventh child of Noel and Jemima Scott Hendricks, was born near Elizabeth City, North Carolina, March 6, 1766, and died near Salem, Indiana, Dec. [illegible], on July 7, 1799, at Hendrickson Creek, Perquotank Co., N.C., he was married to [illegible] the [illegible] born near Elizabeth City, N.C., on June 19, 1771, and died in [illegible] Indiana, on Feb. 7, 1856.

Mary Henley was an attractive girl of Irish descent, her home being in [illegible] County. She was the daughter of Joseph and Mourning Anderson Henley, granddaughter of John and Mary Jordan Henley, great granddaughter of John and Isabel Henley Henley, and great great granddaughter of Patrick and Sarah Sulberger Henley. Patrick Henley had come early to Pennsylvania, but does not seem to have been a member of the Friends. According to the records of the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, he was buried on Feb. [illegible], 1696. His widow, on March 9, 1699, married Mathew Pritchard at the Philadelphia Monthly Meeting, and became an active member of the Friends. It appears that Patrick Henley had lived in Carolina previous to his residence in Philadelphia, as his will given below shows:

Since Mary Henley and Joshua Trueblood were both birthright Quakers, they had met early, and she became a great admirer of Joshua, who was then a young sea captain. He often stopped at the Henley home as a guest when passing their town on the way to Albemarle Sound, where his merchant vessel lay anchored. These two became devoted friends and lovers in their youth, true in their courtship, and faithful in their married life. The sincerity of their devotion is attested by the following love letter, written almost 200 years ago in old English style and spelling but in a very neat hand on parchment, yellow with age:

My Dear Polly - I desire to inform thee one more time of the readiness and very tender love unto me for being so troublesome if I once more beg thy assistance in my unhappy and marvellous fortune which have reduced me to such necessity surcumstance that I cannot possibly proceed my affairs. O my dear I hereby make humble prayer on the [illegible] being assured by sundry marvels and thy company that thee will [illegible] pity the distressed therefore as an object truly deserving compassion. I mean [illegible] Henley and petition thee to consider the many losses and disappointments I have [illegible] which caused me to address myself to thee on this occasion. O my dear [illegible] and but know what trouble I do undergo all for loving thee so I think [illegible] good [illegible] but thy tender hart thy parents chose to obey and would not [illegible] I do pay on thy sake causes me whisper for to wake and some other hand for to [illegible] for loving of thee. My Dear, I expect to sail on the 24th day of the first month, 1790 and if ever return back I hope thee will embrace the opportunity of sending me an answer to this letter and indeavor to satisfice me therein thee was once pleased to answer me in writing which wrote some deare impression upon my mind and filled me with sum awful apprehension. So I cood scasly perceive the day from the knight during the time I received it until this day. O my Dear Polly I always will keep thee in mind wherever I go pray me dear think of me whin I am gone away from thee and if ever I return back I Pray the Lord prepare our way so that we shall injoy our Company together and injoy his Love and he injoy the bond. I beseech the living god to hold us in his hand. I now conclude with the greater love to thee and remain thy dear and loving friend until death. This being wrote four days before my departure.

January the 20 1790

Joshua Trueblood.

Since Joshua Trueblood and Mary Henley were both devout Quakers, their marriage was in accordance with the discipline of the Friends' church. The record of this marriage, copied from the early church records, is as follows:

In April, 1814, Joshua Bruebloed and Joshua Lewis, both of them had [illegible] (Joshua Lewis had married Margaret Hadley on April 26, 1810) [illegible] to the Indiana Territory of which they had heard so much. [illegible] of the places visited. After about three months of travel they [illegible] home in Rockcastle Co., arriving there on July 16, 1814. With this visit [illegible] and prudence began to burn nor did it cease till many hundreds were in their land of promise, Washington County receiving the greater share. Joshua never [illegible] live to return to Indiana, but a younger brother, Benoni, came there in 1818.

In April 15, 1815, we find Joshua Bruebloed and his wife, Mary, [illegible] entre for themselves and their children, Peggy, Nathan, Joshua, Mary, and [illegible] to the Lick Creek Monthly Meeting in Washington Co., Ind. In May, 1815, the [illegible] began with a company led by Joshua Bruebloed.

Leaving behind them their relatives, friends, and neighbors of a life [illegible] union and the graves of many a loved one, they started out on this almost [illegible] trail, through the forests of Tennessee, crossing the mountains at Cumberland [illegible] over the wilds of Kentucky to Crab Orchard in that state. From there they [illegible] north, crossed the Ohio River at Louisville, and arrived in Salem on the [illegible] July, 1815. Joshua Bruebloed settled four miles northeast of Salem, in Section [illegible], Township 2, Range 4 east. Here a fort was erected. This was constructed of [illegible] built high off the ground, and served as a living place for the family and [illegible] friends who gathered here for protection against the Indians. It had one [illegible] door hung on wooden hinges, and one window. Portholes were provided [illegible] they could shoot at any attacking Indians. The space below served for the [illegible] protection against the wild beasts.

As the years passed other relatives and friends joined the colony of [illegible] Lick Creek Monthly Meeting and the Blue River Monthly Meeting became known [illegible]. Here Joshua Bruebloed lived in peace as a prosperous farmer. His diary [illegible] his meeting statements which give considerable insight into the life of [illegible] Here follows summaries from pages of the diary which is in the [illegible] Washington County Historical Society, Salem, Indiana.

THE HARRIS FAMILY

The Harris family is of direct Welsh descent. The name is [illegible] is composed of the Welsh words "Hawa-ruwcd", meaning strong or [illegible] family claims descent from William [illegible], a [illegible] Welsh [illegible], [illegible] [illegible] family of Wales, [illegible] among the noble houses of Gelligy, the Pryses of [illegible], [illegible] of Lords of Harrington, Knights of [illegible], Knight of the [illegible], [illegible] and others.

The earliest arrivals in Virginia of those bearing the name, [illegible] listed in John Gordon Nelson's Original Lists of those who went from [illegible] to the Virginia Plantations from 1607-1700. Although this is not complete, it [illegible] to contain all extant known records. In this we find the following:

"Mar. The master of the Exhibitants of the College Lands in Virginia, [illegible] Sirs, William Tucker, Knight.

John Harris, age 24, in the ship Bona Nova, November, 1619."

"Living at Elizabeth City, Va., Feb. 16, 1623, John Harris."

In the census at Elizabeth City, 1624-25, we find the following:

"John Harris, age 21, in Bona Nova, 1619.

Mary Harris, age 22, in George, 1620."

Also this entry as an unannounced destination in Virginia:

"The undertakers names are to be transported to Virginia, entered in the [illegible] from the port of London, 1635, John Harris, aged 20th".

From the above information it is probable, but not proved, that the [illegible] at Elizabeth City is the forbear of the line of the Harris family with which I [illegible]. It is also probable that the Mary Harris [illegible] was his wife. No other Harris has been found in the records of [illegible], but the Lord Calvert means to find nothing on the line of the Lord [illegible] but a John Harris built a mill in 1673 in Accomac County, Va. [illegible], some one of them, if not all, became [illegible] of the family [illegible] in Tangipahoa Co., La. It is very probable that there in the Virginia [illegible] of Indians in the [illegible] is, [illegible] was.

[illegible] the lives of the dead and the survivors in a [illegible] journey, and also a duty we owe to the living. [illegible] had to leave on record a short account of our dear friend, Thomas Hawkins, who died the 20th of Fifth-month, 1856.

He was born in Pennsylvania County, North Carolina, the [illegible] and was the eldest son of Nathaniel and Sarah Hawkins, who were [illegible] backwoods [illegible].

In the early age of three years he was deprived by death of his father, [illegible] of his mother. Then about five years old he removed with his [illegible] sister (having married again), to what was then Indiana Territory, and settled [illegible] country, in the vicinity of what was afterward [illegible] River. Locating [illegible] this meeting through his varied changes he continued a faithful member, [illegible] ... which the circumstances, or vicissitudes [illegible] to. To them [illegible] the [illegible] village, required the united labor of all, both old and young. [illegible] was early inured to all the privations and hardships of pioneer life, and [illegible] a healthy, vigorous manhood, ready and willing to take his part in every [illegible] and, and although deprived of many of the comforts and luxuries of life, [illegible] opportunities of education, yet in this rugged training was laid the foundation [illegible] and confidence and perceived in knowledge of the affairs of life, for which [illegible] more distinguished. And it was the means of preserving him in a [illegible] of the temptations which surround the young under more favored circumstances. In the year 1831 he was united in marriage to Mahlon Hawkins, who, with [illegible] survives him. In the rearing of their family he was deeply concerned [illegible] in truth, both by precept and example, habits of industry, [illegible] was manifest in that many of the ills that afflict human society, or, in [illegible] of health and prosperity [illegible].

[illegible] in life to such a deep interest in the [illegible] of Society, and [illegible] of more than student of Scripture, and [illegible] upholding of the testimonies of the Society, and [illegible] the true standard, and [illegible] "walk out in it," he was [illegible] and willing to the standard of truth. [illegible] with his [illegible] in the women's part of the church, [illegible] yet he did not allow his worldly concerns to hinder him [illegible]

THE LINEAGE OF MARY HENLEY MORRIS.

Mary Henley Morris, third daughter of Thomas and Gulielma Morris, was born near Salem, Ind., July 24, 1840, a twin with her brother, Joshua. On May 30, 1859, she was married to John Faris, son of Samuel and Sarah Catherine Holsapple Faris, at Cincinnati, Ohio. Although Mary Henley Morris was a birthright Quaker, her husband was not, and as they could not be married according to the ceremonies of the Friends Church, nor could she remain a member in good standing because of her marriage out of unity. Nevertheless, she remained a steadfast believer in the teachings of the Friends Church, and was again associated with it in later life, when some of their restrictions were removed. John Faris was born in Washington Co., Ind., on Sept. 8, 1835, and died in Lawrence Co., Ind., on Feb. 17, 1895. Mary Henley Morris Faris died in Salem, Ind., on March 13, 1918.

THE LIFE OF JOSHUA T. MORRIS.

Joshua T. Morris, second son of Thomas and Guliclma Morris, was born near Salem, Ind., on July 24, 1840, a twin with his sister, Mary Henley Morris. He enlisted during the Civil War with the 53rd Regiment, Indiana Volunteers, and shortly afterwards contracted the measles. After a siege in a St. Louis Hospital, he suffered a relapse, and was removed to the home of his parents near Salem, Indiana, where he died April 26, 1862, in the 21st year of his age. When he returned, pale and emaciated, to his father's home, the many warning admonitions and tender counsel given to his brothers and sisters were expressed in substance in the following poem.

Come, tender sisters, gather round,
I have a word to say,
I hear the awful tempest-sound,
Hence calling me away.

And ere I go I do entreat
Most fervently desire
That you direct aright your feet
In every thought aspire.

Let not my words be soon forgot;
My soul is deeply bowed,
That you may seek to have a lot
With that unnumbered crowd.

Who stand before the throne of God,
Clothed in robes of white,
Who hav e through tribulation trod
Up to the realms of light.

Dear sisters, be religious, do,
Put not off the day,
Ere long 'twill be that each of you
Like me must lowly lay.

Then to one moment's taste of bliss,
A world in sin is nought;
For countless worlds as large as this,
This boon cannot be brought.

That though my days have not been spent,
As the light of truth makes known,
Full sorely I do repent,
And bow before the throne.

My soul is led through deep probation
To implore His grace on high,
Who hath shown me his salvation,
Shown how easy Christians die.

Pray for me, my dearest father,
Pardon, too, the wrong I done,
Come to me, my angel Mother,
Come, once more embrace thy son.

Soon from out this house of clay,
My spirit be forever fled,
I ask not longer here to stay,
There are wars and rumors of war ahead.

Tho' unworthy I am blest,
With the ransomed ones to dwell,
All seems now at perfect rest,
Farewell, mutative things, farewell.

BENEDICTION.

We feel a firm conviction,
With hopes our minds are stayed,
That through our great affliction,
Thy eternal peace was made.

Through adored favor,
Thy robes have been washed clean,
In the blood of the Savior,
That hidden life unseen.

Through Judgment's deep baptizing,
Thy sins were washed away,
And thy sould know an arising,
In celestial beams of day.

We hope when done with time rutsy'dan,
With thee to join that lowly band,
Who came from kindred tongues and nations,
No more to take the parting hand.
